ALEXA
CHUNG

"Everyone needs to start asking where their clothes came from and who made them. We must move away from fast fashion and start buying pieces that we cherish and can wear season after season. There are amazing shopping platforms such as Reve-en-vert.com, The-acey.com and Maison-de-mode.com that check their supply chains are transparent, making it simple to buy eco-conscious labels. My wardrobe is a lot smaller than it used to be. It only contains pieces I know I will wear time and time again."

STYLE TIP

'I wear a lot of khaki. This easy shirtdress is a real classic'

TIMELESS KHAKI DRESS

"I wear a lot of khaki, and this dress reminds me of that classic shot of Veruschka in an Yves Saint Laurent safari jacket. It's an easy shirtdress you can throw on, a real classic. I wear it with Veja sneakers – the soles are made from wild rubber tapped from trees in the Amazon. It's great to wear something that doesn't harm the planet."

Brass hoops, £118; LAURATLOMBARDI.COM

RECYCLED DENIM

"This denim jacket is by Acne, an ecofriendly brand, although that's not part of its brand DNA. The jeans are upcycled Levi's. You don't need 60 pairs, just a couple that fit well that you wear to death. The earrings are by All Blues, which uses upcycled silver and makes everything at a family-run foundry in Sweden."

BIODEGRADABLE LINEN

"This Bardot neckline suits everyone – it makes your neck look longer and your shoulders look elegant. I can pull out this linen dress/top every summer. Linen is biodegradable and dissolves into nothing. The basket was made by artisans in Morocco and the earrings are made from recycled brass."

White ruffle minidress, £125, CLOE CASSANDRO; the-acey.com. Cropped jeans, £245, RE/DONE; net-a-porter.com. Woven bag, £40; EDIT58.COM. Brass earrings, £128; LAURATLOMBARDI.COM. Rings (worn throughout), Rebecca's own
